Tickets to breakout Australian star Chet Faker's first concert on the Sydney Opera House Forecourt sold out in a day.

Now, thanks to Sydney Opera House partner Intel, Faker's second and final concert on Saturday 7 November will be live streamed around the world. Produced by the Opera House's Grammy Award-winning Intel Broadcast Studios, the performance will be the first live online content delivered under the partnership announced in September between the Opera House and the world leader in computing innovation.

Featuring a brand-new live band, nine-piece choir, brass section and special guests including DJ and Faker's 'The Trouble With Us' collaborator Marcus Marr, the Forecourt shows are, in Chet's own words, "a whole new beast" and the final stop on the world tour of his debut album Built on Glass.

Over 10,000 people will watch them from the Forecourt, with the final concert streamed live at 9pm AEDT on Saturday 7 November 2015 at youtube.com/liveatthehouse.

The performances kick off an outstanding series of sold-out Forecourt concerts, including Florence + the Machine and Tame Impala, and a summer Concert Hall music program that features Four Tet, Kurt Vile, Beach House and Sleater-Kinney.

Ben Marshall, Head of Contemporary Music at Sydney Opera House, said: "A performance on the Sydney Opera House steps is one of the grandest gestures this city can make for an artist, and it's highly appropriate we're presenting Chet Faker's mighty new 'Built on Live' performance here. It's also thrilling to be sharing Chet's remarkable performance as a live stream, broadcasting this unique location and unique artist around the world. The Opera House is the symbol of modern Australia; we are proud to present one of the country's great new artists and we want as many people as possible to experience this wonderful moment."

Anna Torres, Marketing Director at Intel ANZ said: "This partnership is all about using technology to create incredible artistic experiences to crack open the Opera House. As the first piece of live content to be produced under the Intel Broadcast Studios collaboration, this live stream will reach new online audiences. For many fans around the world, it will be their only chance to witness one of Australia's most popular contemporary musicians perform at one of Australia's greatest venues."

Faker will lead audiences on a sonic journey that weaves together the buttery-smooth soul and minimal electronic beats of 2014's Built On Glass. As The Guardian has said of the tour: "Faker commanded the audience throughout the set. The atmosphere was charged, the air was thick, and singing out... he enveloped us."
